

In Your Cathedral

(lyrics & music by Joe Scott, Janjoral Publishing/BMI)

Your voice it trembled a thousand miles away
I could do nothing, all I could say
Is I'm sorry, ooh, I'm so sorry
You told me what happened, someone splintered your voice
It broke my heart to know, you really had no choice
And I'm sorry, ooh, I'm so sorry

*Chorus: In your cathedral, it's safe and warm
You know who you are, 'cause you've weathered those storms
In your cathedral, you know what is true
In your cathedral, I'm waiting for you.*

This place in your heart you showed me long ago
I didn't understand then, but now I know
Why you laugh in the spring and cry in the fall
Your tears like a window, showing me all

Chorus

If I could bring back all the things that you've lost
Things of the heart, now what would that cost?
Your soul is so precious, and your voice so strong
Your gift is the music and you need to carry on

Chorus

*Chorus: In your cathedral, it's safe and warm
You know who you are, 'cause you've weathered those storms
In your cathedral, you know what is true
In your cathedral, I'm there with you.*
